

LATEST FROM BAPTIST DRIVE

But few changes have been made from the report of a week ago in the 75 Million Campaign for Bethel Baptist Association. There are still 9 churches unreported, 2 in Todd, 3 in Logan and 5 in Christian county. Two of those in Christian county have made progress and this is perhaps true of most of them. There is no doubt that the association will subscribe its quota of $450,000, though, it is now short a few thousand dollars.

The latest figures are here given:

Warren Goes Over.

Bowling Green, Ky., Dec. 12.—J. S. Dickey, association organizer in Warren county of the 75 Million Campaign, announces that twenty-three Baptist churches have reported $131,127.10 with four churches to hear from. The quota is $130,000 and all of the churches have over-subscribed and amount appointed them. The First Baptist Church in this city has reported $67,825. The quota for this church was $50,000.

Cumberland Goes Over.

Clarksville, Tenn., Dec. 12.—The Cumberland Association is over the top and continues to advance in the Baptist 75 Million Campaign, according to Organizer George Fort, who reported Tuesday that returns give a total of $118,000 subscribed for a quota of $110,000. Reports of subscriptions are still being received.

Little River Doubles
Little River Baptist Church, near Bins' Mill in Christian county, in Little River Association, with a quota of $2,000 has raised $4,050. Rev. R. H. Coleman is pastor of the church.

Gracey Church Almost Over.
A delegation of workers from the Hopkinsville First Church visited West Union Church, Gracey, at the Sunday School hour last Sunday, and found the church well organized and $6,000 already subscribed. Tomorrow is the regular preaching day and the rest of the $7,500 quota is to be raised. Rev. Brandon is the pastor. A request was made that the campaign workers return.

WHAT DID THE IRISHMAN SAY?

(Rehoboth Sunday Herald.)
Two travelers, on English and the other Irish, were touring the back woods of Australia, and arriving at a certain settlement, they were given hospitality by a good-looking woman living in a small but spotlessly clean hut. Requiring further attention during the evening, they were waited upon by a Chinaman. Curious, they asked the woman who the Chinaman might be—her servant perhaps. "No," replied the woman, "he's my husband."
"What?" A nice white woman like you marry a Chinaman?
"Oh, that's nothing," said the woman, "I've a sister, and she's married to an Irishman!"

A Calico Girl

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1915, by The Western Newspaper Union.)

"Good-by till next year, little Doris! balled Sidney Throop from the old fashioned carryall, conveying himself and three fellow vacationers from camp to the little railroad depot.

He waved his hand in kindly fare well at the forlorn figure of a girl of sixteen, Doris Lee, who stood at the rustic gate of her uncle's home. She smiled bravely, then turned her head away, and Paul Faber, at the side of Throop, noticing a fluttering handkerchief, remarked:

"I declare! That little sprite is sorry to have you leave—she's crying."

"I am sorry myself," replied Sidney gravely. "It has been a pleasure to know such an unspoiled child of nature."

"She hasn't been the same since yesterday—seems to have avoided the crowd for some reason or other."

"I can tell you why," piped in another. "She looked positively awed when Faber's sister stopped at the camp in her automobile. I suppose the poor little wild flower was stunned at the magnificence of the acknowledged belle of the season."

So the episode passed, but Sidney Throop sat silent and thoughtful. Their camp had been located in close proximity to the farm owned by the uncle of Doris, and it had been her task to bring fresh milk and cream morning and evening to the temporary sojourners. An artless, innocent child, she had the good fortune to deal with real gentlemen, and as the days ran on grew to regard them as true friends.

"If I am to do the extra chores of carrying milk and eggs and chickens to the picnicers," said Doris to her uncle the next day, you must allow me a little pin money."

"Why not?" interrogated Mr. Lee good naturedly. "But I hope seeing these gay people from the city hasn't put a lot of vanity into that sensible little head of yours."

Ever since the day she had met the fashionable Miss Anice Faber there had become a model established in the mind of Doris as to what the real lady of society should look like.

"I suppose Mr. Thorpe made some wide comparisons between that silk-and-lace beauty and humble little me in calico," mused Doris, and naturally a trifle bitterly, and then a change came over her. She nurtured a species of reserve and every penny of pin money she acquired she put carefully away. Gradually her wardrobe began to include little articles of feminine adornment dear to the girlish heart.

A year had rolled around and Mr. Lee informed Doris that "the crowd of young fellows," as he termed it, had advised him that they would take the old camp cottage for a month.

Doris was in a bewildering state of animation. For a full year she had dreamed, planned and saved. It almost took away the breath of the poor vacationers when there burst upon their vision the afternoon of their arrival a new and glorified Doris.

She wore a silky, sealy dress skirt, quite "vampish," having a certain trailing arabesque effect. It fitted like the fuzz of a clingstone peach. Her breath came quick, her eyes glowed like diamonds, but as the four young men greeted her friendly enough, but vaguely, Doris shivered. Somehow she traced not only surprise in their faces, but a certain reproachful, pitying sentiment.

The unusual gravity of Thorpe crushed her. The young face clouded when she had ascertained what supplies they would require daily from the farmhouse. Doris hastened from the camp, reached a covert, and threw herself on the ground in a wild paroxysm of vexation and disappointment.

"What is the trouble, little friend?" spoke Sidney, who had followed her, and she came to her feet angry and defiant. She darted one look at him and fled precipitately. To both a correct conception had come. Sidney at once comprehended that the foolish little maid had modeled herself after Miss Faber to appear modern and impressive, and she realized that she must appear grotesque and out of her element, and her vanity was wounded. Like some penitent she appeared at the camp in propria persona the following morning, her own modest natural self. She was reserved and looked pained and humbled. Sidney accompanied her as she started home.

"Dear little friend," he spoke almost tenderly, "it seems good to see the bright fairy we all of us love once again as nature intended her."

"And I did it all for you!" sobbed Doris. "Miss Faber—"

"Miss Faber, confidentially, has wrinkles to conceal, and none of your lovely roses on her cheeks," observed Sidney.

"But I am only a calico girl, and I thought that if I was dressed like Miss Faber—"

"Made up, you mean," interrupted Sidney. "You don't need that." He could scarcely resist the impulse to take her in his arms in all her artless grace and beauty. "Doris, dear," he said seriously, "there is one man who always wishes to find you as you are—a sweet child of nature—one who hopes some day to have you as all his own—myself."

And she read truth and adoration in his earnest, longing eyes, and was content.

FAILED TO TASTE OR SMELL FIRST

Three persons have reported to the police that they have been victimized by a negro who sold them a quart of fluid purporting to be good whiskey, but which turned out to be vinegar. The prices paid were $8 to $12 per quart, and the trading was always done in an alley. Each time the vinegar was in a regular whiskey bottle, bore a nice clean label of a standard brand and across the top was a government bottled-in-bond stamp. It was the latter which convinced the purchasers of the genuineness of the contents and caused them to buy without first tasting. How the negro secured the stamps is a mystery. None of the purchasers knew the negro.

Get Acquainted With

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

The Caloric Pipeless Furnace is guaranteed to heat your entire home with only one register. More than 50,000 Calorics are now in use, and during the coldest days of last winter kept homes warmer with less fuel than the old style heating systems they displaced.

We do not ask you to experiment with this furnace. We KNOW what it will do. If we recommend it for your home after studying your floor plans, it is installed with an absolute guarantee of perfect heat in all rooms. If it does not do exactly as we claim for it after a fair trial, we will take it out at no expense to you.

Do not confuse the Caloric with the ordinary furnace. It is not an old-style furnace with the pipes left off, but an entirely new method of heating. It heats the air—sends the pure, fresh warmth through the house, draws the colder air back into the furnace to be purified and heated and again started on its trip through every room.

35% Fuel Saving

Because of its one register, the Caloric accomplishes better heating results with less fuel. Some owners claim fifty to seventy-five per cent saving. We know that it will save thirty-five per cent over any other method.

Demonstration At This Store

We shall have a special demonstration of the Caloric at this store. Come in and talk to us. We will carefully go over your heating requirements, and if we recommend the Caloric, we will give you an absolute guarantee of satisfactory performance in your own home. This written guarantee is backed by us and the manufacturers.

Come in and talk to us. Learn what this furnace will do toward keeping your home warm and saving you money on your fuel bill.
